being a gap of 100 yards more before any others were reached. Organ didn't draw away from Pores until the eighth mile.

Kolehmainen and Kyronen paced off the miles together thus; sixth, 31:514-55 reventh, 37:214-5; eighth, 43:573-55 reighth, ting along stride for stride. About 100 vards back were Pores and Organ, there being a gap of 100 yards more before Victory Over N. Y. U.

WILLIE KYRONEN (on the right) beating Hannes Kolehmainen by the proverbial eyelash in the annual modified marathon yesterday. All who saw the finish in City Hall Park thought it a dead heat except those in line with the tape, who could see that the younger of the two Finns breasted the worsted six or eight inches ahead of the Olympic champion, as this picture shows. Notice the relative positions of their feet. They ran shoulder to shoulder throughout the 12% miles with the exception of a block or two at the start and the final sprint of forty yards.
